Designed in the Spanish Colonial Revival style, it has a low-pitch side-gable roof with clay tiles over the main entrance as well as a shed roof with clay tiles over the entry. The exterior walls are clad with smooth stucco. The residence is asymmetrically aligned on the eastern portion of the primary (north) elevation, while the western portion of the north elevation is symmetrically aligned in both fenestration and decoration. The fenestration consists of original wood casement and fixed windows throughout the residence. One window has been replaced. Decorative features of the residence include stucco walls ending in piers with slanted sides leading to the main entrance, and original steps leading to the entryway. On the western end of the primary elevation a large arched window centered on the western bay is flanked on the lower and upper levels with vertically aligned narrow windows.
